

One World Earth Day Celebration 2025

In a world that seems increasingly divided, One World would like to work with K12 educators and youth from across the world to celebrate our human connectedness and this coming Earth Day, April 22nd.

Inspired by the Poem Night Passing included below, we would like to bring One Worlders together to celebrate our humanity and Spaceship Earth next Tuesday.

One World and the team of students and educators from Westchester Green County USA, Brazil, Ecuador, Argentina, and Mexico would like to connect with our friends in China and help them welcome Earth Day at 8 am Chinese time, April 22nd, in a brief 15 to 20 minute exchange where we speak of the importance of staying connected and coming together to collaborate to keep our planet earth sustainable.

Moving forward to Tuesday, 7 am EST time, the team of students and educators from Westchester Green County, USA would like to welcome Earth Day into their communities, inviting friends from Europe and Africa, and China to celebrate Earth Day, completing the night's passage around our planet. Here again, the goal is to host a short 15 to 20 minute get together where students exchange ideas and encouragement to engage in the fight against climate change before filing a short video celebrating our pale blue dot in a vast and endless sky.

The goal of these brief get-togethers is to celebrate our human connectedness on a special day. Our hope is that each of the school's will find time to produce a short video celebrating Earth Day and then share your videos with us as we have in years past as you can see below.

For the first time in human history we have the opportunity to create a world of sustainable abundance where we eliminate poverty, hunger and solve our climate change challenge if, if, if, ... we learn to work together and collaborate on our Spaceship Earth.     Joe Carvin April 17, 2025

Night Passing

Morning in America

Pass the night to Asian children

When Asian children wake up

Pass the night to European children

When European children wake up

Pass the night to African children.

Children pass the night

because they have dreams of the future.

They can change the world.

The night passing

is like a race

that never stops

till the end of time.
